

Christmas is Almost Here

It's December and Christmas is almost here.
People are happy and full of good cheer. (some of it's legal)

There is lots of smiling and lots of caring and lots of giving and lots of sharing.

There are people standing in lines just to buy.
I told you that you should be done by July.

Grantsville looks so pretty and bright.
Everything is lit up with a lot of light.

The children are happy with their eyes aglow.
Oh, look on the ground right there, is that snow?

I love Christmas because I love giving.
It's just one good reason for living.

I wish all of my readers and friends a Christmas full of love– and all of the Christmas blessings that come from above.

I'd like the Christmas feeling to last all year long...
And after the year's end to just go on and on.

So keep the happy feeling that you have right now in your heart for always.
You'll feel so much better for all the rest of your days.

Have a Happy New Year. I'll be back in 2012.
