

Here I am back on my soapbox again. It's about TV and commercials or I should say COMMERCIALS!! Do all of these companies think that we are deaf as a post? If we aren't by now after a few more rounds of commercials we'll be stone deaf.

We'll be watching a show with normal sound (well as normal as can be expected for a wife with a husband who actually is sort of deaf) and all of a sudden the volume doubles. So, you have to find the remote that gets lost between the newspapers, TV guides, pens and tablets. By that time the commercial is over. Then we get five minutes of show and we are back to commercials again. By the time you get through 18 commercials you forget the plot or who was the good guys or the bad guys.

Sigh!! Oh, wait a minute; I think that I recognize that guy. Hmmm, maybe not, oh, look another commercial. Quick find the remote. Hit the mute button. And so it goes. Five minutes of show and anywhere from 12 to 18 really loud "COMMERCIALS"!! The remote. The remote. Where's the remote?

Til' next month
