

Summer is Over

*Summer is over and I am so very glad
But the garden is done and that makes me sad*

*The tomato plants have leaves that are turning brown
They are dried up and looking droopy with leaves turned upside down*

*The onions have been dug up and put out to dry
They will taste so good in chile this winter, oh my*

*The potatoes have been dug, dried, and stored away
They will taste good when cooked every which way*

*The corn was enjoyed just about every other day
But there is some tucked away in the freezer to enjoy the same way*

*On the cob is the very best
And enjoyed with zest*

*Although the peppers are still very green
There are not many peppers seen*

*The cucumbers, oh my, what a crop
It seemed that they would never stop*

*The zucchinis do well for a month or two
Then they are gone for good-boo hoo*

*The acorn squash did well for awhile
Until a "critter" carried them off with a smile*

*We did manage to actually eat one squash
Before they were carried off by gosh*

*So, this is my tale of joy and woe
The garden I will miss but this summer should go*

*It should fade away and move onto Fall
When our beautiful state stands colorful and tall*

*Happy autumn to all. Get out and look around.
Til' next month,
~Judy~*
